

FORTNIGHTLY FOCUS

'Drop-In' supported accommodation

Interaction provides three levels of supported accommodation – Drop In (low level), 24 Hour Support (medium level), and 24 Hour Intensive Support (high level). In this edition of Fortnightly Focus we put the spotlight on 'Drop In' Supported accommodation.

Whether you're living in your own home, or part of an Interaction group home, drop in support is available for you. Interaction is empowering people with disability to live more independently.

- Do you need (or would you like) a bit of extra help to keep on top of everything?
- Perhaps you want to be more involved with regular everyday activities, but find it difficult and too time consuming to get yourself out of the house.
- Maybe you're at the stage where you want to move out of the family home, but are a little hesitant because you feel like all the responsibilities that come with moving out of Mum and Dad's place are a little more than you can handle straight away, yet you want the independence.

The aim of Interaction's drop in supported accommodation is to provide practical assistance – supporting your goals for where and how you wish to live. Drop-in support has been designed for people with a disability who require low to moderate levels of support, and who require a level of assistance with informed decision making.

Drop In Supports include:

- Practical support for your everyday living needs
- Skills development, increasing your confidence to make the transition to independent living
- Flexible support – Interaction focuses heavily on providing creative solutions for your individual needs. We are not a one size fits all organisation

Interaction can provide drop in support at a level dependent on your NDIS Plan.

Did you know Interaction now has a 'Vacancy Expression of Interest' form that can be completed online?

Dane and Marija

Dane and Marija have received low level supported accommodation services from Interaction since November 2015. They receive help with things such as meals, house chores, shopping, and general community access. Dane and Marija enjoy the kind and caring nature of staff and programs and activities that Interaction provides for them (camp, Fitability, Christmas parties etc). They both enjoy playing musical instruments, attending local shows and festivals and spending time with their cousin.
